New entry in 'Spin the Globe' takes readers to Andes Mountains

Edward Moldenhauer's new book follows Frederick to Peru, uncovers secrets of Incan empire

BURLESON, Texas – Every night, author Edward Moldenhauer told his children tales of frogs, bunnies, knights and princesses. When he finally ran out of ideas for stories, he remembered the globe in the corner of their room. It was at that moment he realized it was time to take the children's bedtime stories to a new setting: Earth. At that moment, the Frederick von Wigglebottom series was born.

Moldenhauer invites readers to enjoy his new children's book, "Spin the Globe: The Incredible Adventures of Frederick von Wigglebottom: Alpacas in the Andes" (published by Trafford Publishing), the third installment in the Frederick von Wigglebottom series.

In the newest edition of Moldenhauer's series, Frederick finds himself in Cusco, Peru. Joined by his two new friends, Ernesto and Umiña, he discovers the history surrounding Cusco and the many wonders of the Andes, as well as the Incan empire.

Ernesto – a young Mestizo boy born in Lima, Peru – utilizes the knowledge of his conservation scientist parents to teach Frederick about the animals of the Andes and the history of the conquistadors. Umiña, a young Incan girl, is the daughter of an archaeologist. Using what she's learned from her father, she teaches Frederick about the rich history of the Incas.

Moldenhauer hopes his books incite within young readers a desire to learn more about each featured subject. He invites readers to visit www.spin-the-globe.com for more information.

About the Author

Edward Moldenhauer is a retired Navy pharmacist. While having been published in several professional journals and as primary author of "The History of Pharmacy in the United States Navy," his true passion is honing his array of "Ed's Useless Trivia" to baffle friends and foes alike and to teach his children about every topic imaginable – sometimes to their dismay. He lives in Burleson, Texas, with his wife, Jo Ann, children and two dogs. When he's not watching history shows or reading, he enjoys the outdoors and fresh air. He invites readers to enjoy the other three installments of his Spin the Globe series, featuring adventures in Australia, Norway and Belize.

Trafford Publishing, an Author Solutions, LLC, author services imprint, was the first publisher in the world to offer an "on-demand publishing service," and has led the independent publishing revolution since its establishment in 1995.
